English

Unit 4 – Inventions

WALT:

6Ug.04 – Use a range of past simple active forms for habits and states and begin to use passive forms.

WALT: Use a range of past simple active forms for habits and states and begin to use passive forms.

I can explain what the past simple tense is.

I can identify in a text where the past simple tense is.

I can convert between the active and passive form using the past simple.

WALT: Use a range of past simple active forms for habits and states and begin to use passive forms.

Retrieval Practice

I (13) would like to make some friends who live in other parts of Canada so I can learn more about the country.

(14) If you are interested, please write back and tell

(15) me about yourself.

WALT: Use a range of past simple active forms for habits and states and begin to use passive forms.

Starter – Read these two sentences.

Sinner and Alcaraz played a tennis match yesterday.

Yesterday’s tennis match was played between Sinner and Alcaraz.

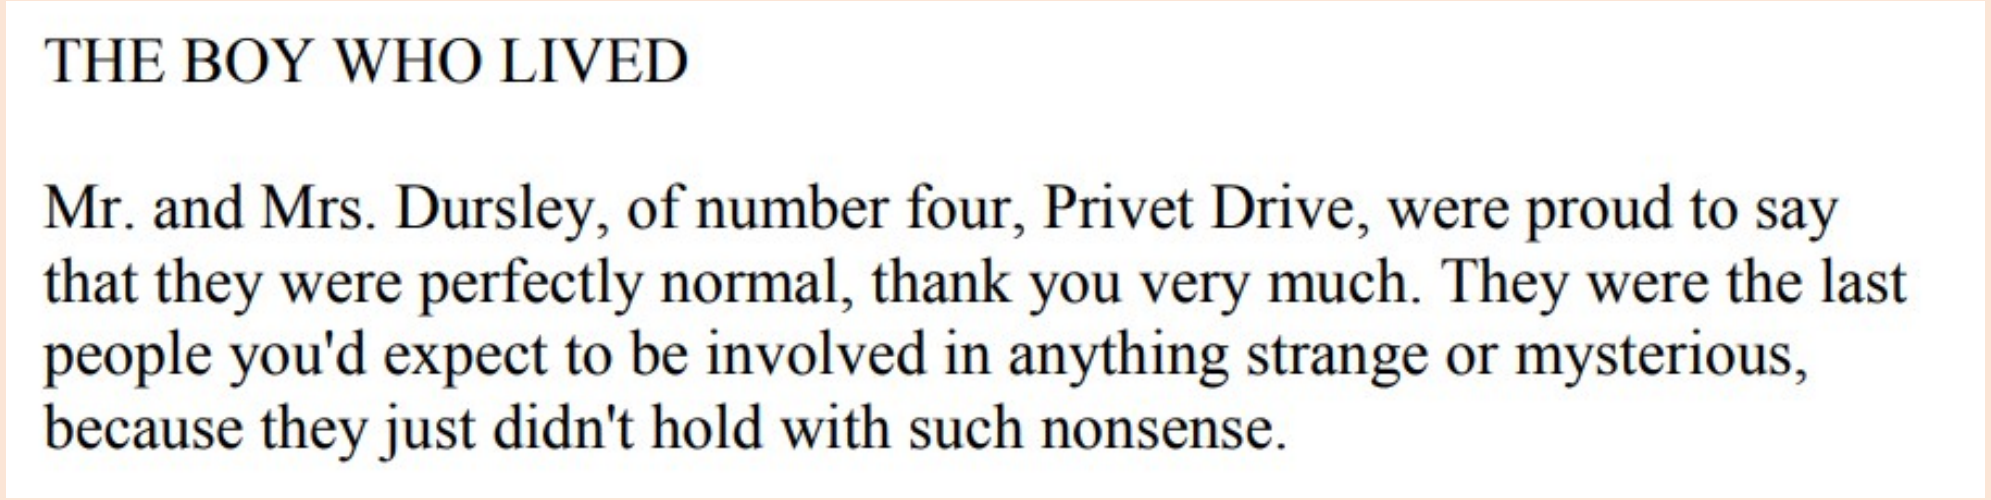

What is the difference between these two sentences?

WALT: Use a range of past simple active forms for habits and states and begin to use passive forms.

The past simple tense

We use the past simple tense to talk about actions in the past that have finished.

A lot of stories and books are written in the past simple tense.

THE BOY WHO LIVED

Mr. and Mrs. Dursley, of number four, Privet Drive, were proud to say that they were perfectly normal, thank you very much. They were the last people you'd expect to be involved in anything strange or mysterious, because they just didn't hold with such nonsense.

WALT: Use a range of past simple active forms for habits and states and begin to use passive forms.

The past simple tense

Often when we use the past simple tense to talk about finished actions we specify when something happened.

Ms. Colette was born in 1999.

Ms. Colette was born 27 years ago.

In 1999, Ms. Colette was born.

27 years ago, Ms. Colette was born.

WALT: Use a range of past simple active forms for habits and states and begin to use passive forms.

Active and passive voice.

In the past, we have already looked at the active and passive voice in the present simple tense.

Active: Penguins eat fish.

Passive: Fish are eaten by penguins.

When do we use the active voice?

When do we use the passive voice?

WALT: Use a range of past simple active forms for habits and states and begin to use passive forms.

Active and passive voice.

We can also use the active and passive voice in the past simple tense.

Let’s look back at our starter.

Sinner and Alcaraz played a tennis match yesterday.

Yesterday’s tennis match was played between Sinner and Alcaraz.

WALT: Use a range of past simple active forms for habits and states and begin to use passive forms.

Scientists at Honda, the Japanese company, started developing Asimo in the 1980s and presented it to the world in 2000. The company created Asimo to help people in need with tasks around the house. Since then, scientists and designers have upgraded Asimo's technology, so it has more and more skills and abilities.

Can you spot the past simple tense?

We can use the past simple to talk about actions in the past.
We often specify when something happened.

WALT: Use a range of past simple active forms for habits and states and begin to use passive forms.

Read the text and underline the past tense verbs that have been used.

and check your ideas from Activity 1.

Imagine a robot that can play football, dance, hop, jump and pour you a drink! Meet Asimo, the most advanced humanoid robot in the world. Asimo can walk on two legs and move by itself using sensors inside its body. It can understand voice commands and human gestures; it recognises moving objects and it can work out the distance and direction of those objects. It is just over one metre tall and has a rechargeable battery.

Scientists at Honda, the Japanese company, started developing Asimo in the 1980s and presented it to the world in 2000. The company created Asimo to help people in need with tasks around the house. Since then, scientists and designers have upgraded Asimo's technology, so it has more and more skills and abilities.

Asimo has become a worldwide celebrity and it has demonstrated its skills at science fairs and on TV shows all over the world! In 2005, Mickey Mouse welcomed Asimo at Disneyland. In 2011, it appeared on a TV quiz show in the UK, surprising everyone by dancing and pouring the presenter a drink; in 2014, it played football with the former US president, Barack Obama. It has even received royal welcomes in Dubai and the UK.

In 2018, Honda stopped producing the robot in its current form, but the company is continuing to use Asimo's technology to help people who need it most. Watch this space!

WALT: Use a range of past simple active forms for habits and states and begin to use passive forms.

What time reference has been used with the past tense verbs?

and check your ideas from Activity 1.

Imagine a robot that can play football, dance, hop, jump and pour you a drink! Meet Asimo, the most advanced humanoid robot in the world. Asimo can walk on two legs and move by itself using sensors inside its body. It can understand voice commands and human gestures; it recognises moving objects and it can work out the distance and direction of those objects. It is just over one metre tall and has a rechargeable battery.

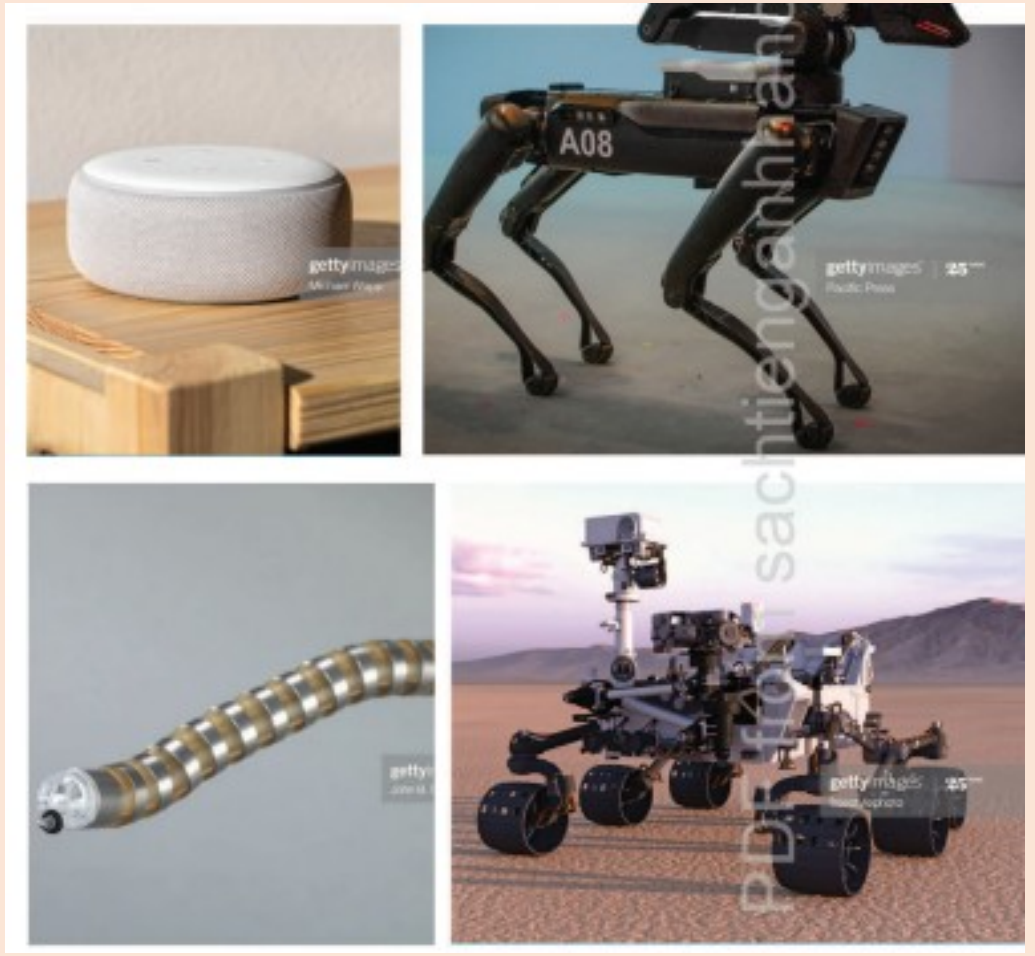

Scientists at Honda, the Japanese company, started developing Asimo in the 1980s and presented it to the world in 2000. The company created Asimo to help people in need with tasks around the house. Since then, scientists and designers have upgraded Asimo's technology, so it has more and more skills and abilities.

Asimo has become a worldwide celebrity and it has demonstrated its skills at science fairs and on TV shows all over the world! In 2005, Mickey Mouse welcomed Asimo at Disneyland. In 2011, it appeared on a TV quiz show in the UK, surprising everyone by dancing and pouring the presenter a drink; in 2014, it played football with the former US president, Barack Obama. It has even received royal welcomes in Dubai and the UK.

In 2018, Honda stopped producing the robot in its current form, but the company is continuing to use Asimo's technology to help people who need it most. Watch this space!

WALT: Use a range of past simple active forms for habits and states and begin to use passive forms.

6 Talk What other jobs do you think robots can perform? Look at the photos for ideas. Which jobs might be better for robots to do than humans?

WALT: Use a range of past simple active forms for habits and states and begin to use passive forms.

I can explain what the past simple tense is.

I can identify in a text where the past simple tense is.

I can convert between the active and passive form using the past simple.

WALT: Use a range of past simple active forms for habits and states and begin to use passive forms.

Plenary

Ms. Colette says this sentence is in the passive form. Is she correct?

In 2000, Asimo was introduced to the world.