

English

Unit 2 - Sport

WALT:

6Rm.02 Read independently a range of short, simple fiction and non-fiction texts with confidence and enjoyment.

WALT: Read independently a range of short, simple fiction and non-fiction texts with confidence and enjoyment.

I can read a text aloud.

I can answer questions on a text.

I can write my own short piece of commentary and read it using intonation and stress correctly.

WALT: Read independently a range of short, simple fiction and non-fiction texts with confidence and enjoyment.

Retrieval Practice

Sam: Hi Alex. Do you want to come to my house tomorrow?

Alex: 0D....

Sam: That's a shame. What are you doing?

H

Alex: 16 [1]

Sam: Wow! How did you get tickets for that?

H

Alex: 17 [1]

Sam: You're so lucky. I'd love to go to that.

E

Alex: 18 [1]

Sam: What channel is it on?

Alex: 19A... [1]

Sam: I'd like a scarf, please. I can give you the money now if you like.

Alex: 20G.. [1]

Sam: Thanks, Alex. That's really kind.

A I'll check and let you know. Do you want me to bring you anything back?

B Our mum got them for us.

C Do you want to come with us?

D Thanks, but I'll be out all day.

E Perhaps you'll get to see it next time but you can watch this match on TV.

F There are no tickets left.

G Don't worry. It's your birthday soon. It can be your present.

H Didn't I tell you? I'm going to London with my brother to watch the football final.

WALT: Read independently a range of short, simple fiction and non-fiction texts with confidence and enjoyment.

Starter – What sports are being commentated on?

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=GHtlxjKPP9w>

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=UmlYanq5gH8> (from 1:25)

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fZI_LVU7a18

WALT: Read independently a range of short, simple fiction and non-fiction texts with confidence and enjoyment.

Off Side by Tom Palmer

1 Danny and his dad came to every city home game. And Danny acted as commentator because, when he was younger, his dad had been blinded in an accident. He'd had to stop work, stop playing football with Danny, stop almost everything.

Danny remembered worrying if his dad would give up going to the football too, but on the day of the first game, after he was out of hospital, dad had stood up.

'Danny?'

'Yeah.'

'Come on, son.'

Since then, Danny telling his dad j

2 ... The second half was fantastic. City poured players forward. Their twin strike force looked lethal. Sam Roberts, England's leading scorer and new sensation, Ghanaian international Anthony Owusu. Danny struggled to keep up his commentary just

3 One-nil. An awesome strike.

'Owusu is playing. And as he spoke, ricocheted off a d power. At first the Half a second late

Danny and his dad leapt into each other's arms as the crowd exploded. First with the loudest cheer of the season, then with the name of the scorer. Over and over again.

Ow-usu! Ow-usu! Ow-usu!

When the fans had gone quiet enough for anyone to talk, Dad spoke.

'What happened?'

This always amused Danny. His dad would raise the top of his voice one minute, then calm down in the first place.

'Owusu...' Danny said breathlessly.

'I gathered that.'

'... he just blasted it in!'

'Yeah?'

4 Danny knew his dad needed more. So he decided to give it to him: like a proper reporter on the radio. He breathed in and began.

'City's amazing Ghanaian international has scored the goal of the season. Picking the ball up on the edge of the area, he took it on his knee, then fired an unstoppable volley past the paralysed United keeper. That's Owusu's twentieth goal of the season. And just goes to show that he deserved the African Player of the Year award he received only two weeks ago.'

Read the text to yourself now.

Page 36 - 38

WALT: Read independently a range of short, simple fiction and non-fiction texts with confidence and enjoyment.

Now lets read it together.

Off Side by Tom Palmer

1 Danny and his dad came to every City home game. And Danny acted as commentator because, when he was younger, his dad had been blinded in an accident. He'd had to stop work, stop playing football with Danny, stop almost everything.

Danny remembered worrying if his dad would give up going to the football too, but on the day of the first game, after he was out of hospital, dad had stood up.

'Danny?'

'Yeah.'

'Come on, son. City are at home. What are you waiting for?'

Since then, Danny had become skilled at describing live football, telling his dad just enough so that he could follow the game...

WALT: Read independently a range of short, simple fiction and non-fiction texts with confidence and enjoyment.

2

... The second half was fantastic. City poured players forward. Their twin strike force looked lethal. Sam Roberts, England's leading scorer and new sensation, Ghanaian international Anthony Owusu. Danny struggled to keep up his commentary just as much as the United defenders struggled to keep up with City's strikers.

'Owusu is playing deep,' Danny told his dad. 'Roberts further up.'

And as he spoke, City's midfield dynamo launched a high cross into the United area. The ball ricocheted off a defender to Owusu, who controlled it on his knee and volleyed it with amazing power. At first the ball seemed to be going way over, but then it began to dip into a powerful arc. Half a second later, it was crashing in off the crossbar and bouncing about in the goal.

WALT: Read independently a range of short, simple fiction and non-fiction texts with confidence and enjoyment.

3 One-nil. An awesome strike.

Danny and his dad leapt into each other's arms as the crowd exploded. First with the loudest cheer of the season, then with the name of the scorer. Over and over again.

Ow-usu! Ow-usu! Ow-usu!

When the fans had gone quiet enough for anyone to talk, Dad spoke.

‘What happened?’

This always amused Danny. His dad would be leaping around, punching the air, screaming at the top of his voice one minute, then calmly asking to know why he's been jumping around in the first place.

‘Owusu...’ Danny said breathlessly.

‘I gathered that.’

‘... he just blasted it in!’

‘Yeah?’

WALT: Read independently a range of short, simple fiction and non-fiction texts with confidence and enjoyment.

4 Danny knew his dad needed more. So he decided to give it to him: like a proper reporter on the radio. He breathed in and began.

‘City’s amazing Ghanaian international has scored the goal of the season. Picking the ball up on the edge of the area, he took it on his knee, then fired an unstoppable volley past the paralysed United keeper. That’s Owusu’s twentieth goal of the season. And just goes to show that he deserved the African Player of the Year award he received only two weeks ago.’

WALT: Read independently a range of short, simple fiction and non-fiction texts with confidence and enjoyment.

I do

In section two, what word describes how the players moved forward onto the ball?

We do

In section three, why did the crowd explode?

WALT: Read independently a range of short, simple fiction and non-fiction texts with confidence and enjoyment.

Your task

Answer the questions in your learner book.

Remember –

- Carefully read the questions
- Check your answers

WALT: Read independently a range of short, simple fiction and non-fiction texts with confidence and enjoyment.

I can read a text aloud.

I can answer questions on a text.

I can write my own short piece of commentary and read it using intonation and stress correctly.